First International Meeting of Territories of Co-responsibility

Mulhouse 25 September 2009
Société Industrielle

VILLE DE MULHOUSE
mulhouse.fr

Introduction by the Mayor Mulhouse, City of Co-responsibility

From its rich industrial history, Mulhouse has inherited an ability to persuade the various stakeholders in the city's affairs to work together for the good of their community. The groundbreaking approach proposed by the Council of Europe in 2005, centring on "territories of co-responsibility", therefore fits in perfectly with Mulhouse's history, talents and ambitions. As pioneers in this field, we have drawn on the Council of Europe's support to test this approach in various spheres, leading to a broad variety of pilot projects. The results are now clear for all to see.

We have organised this first international meeting out of a desire to share and compare with others both our achievements and future prospects, and it gives us great pleasure to welcome you.

Jean-Marie BOCKEL
Maire de Mulhouse,
Secretary of State for Justice

Introductions by the President of the Congress The Congress and citizen participation

Citizen participation has always been one of the major goals of the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of the Council of Europe. For instance, the European Charter of Local Self-Government regards the participation of citizens in the management of public affairs not only as a right but, above all, as a key contribution to the health of local democracy.

Many other Congress texts encourage participation. For example, the new European Urban Charter asserts the need for shared governance, fostering more cohesive and participatory towns and cities.

Accordingly, the Congress supports the territories of co-responsibility project, which rises to the challenge that our communities must face in the modern globalised world by establishing new relationships with city dwellers and citizens, placing them at the heart of public decision-making.

Ian MICALLEF
President ad interim of the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of the Council of Europe
